Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurIn the nineteen sixties many ten pound pommies had never left England before and most expected never to return or see loved ones again. George Palmer saw Australia as a land of opportunities for his four children, his wife longed for warmth and space and their daughters ambition was to swim in the sea and own a dog. For migrant children it was a big adventure, for fathers the daunting challenge of finding work and providing for their family, but for the wives the loneliness of settling in a strange place.Prsentation de l'diteurIn the nineteen sixties many ten pound pommies had never left England
